Lt. Governor's Office on Aging Awards $350,000
Grant to Georgetown County Bureau of Aging Services

Columbia – Lt. Governor André Bauer's Office on Aging announced today that the Georgetown County Bureau of Aging Services will receive a $350,000 state grant to aid in the construction of a community center that will serve the residents of Pawley's Island and the Waccamaw Neck area. Senior centers in eight South Carolina communities will share in a $1.9 million package of state assistance that will be distributed to support construction and renovation efforts statewide.

"The services and programs that these centers provide make a positive impact and help create many opportunities to improve the quality of life of seniors and their families in those communities," said Bauer.

The proposed Parkersville Intergenerational Center would include a 6,604 square foot wing dedicated to providing services such as nutrition, health and wellness programming, recreation and social activities to seniors. Since taking responsibility for operating the county's aging programs in July of 2004, the new County Bureau of Aging Services has reopened several senior centers that had previously been closed and begun implementing plans to address the explosion in the growth of the senior population in Georgetown county. County officials estimate that the number of seniors in Georgetown County is growing by approximately 10,000 a year. South Carolina's senior population as a whole is expected to double over the next two decades.

The South Carolina Senior Center Permanent Improvement Program (PIP)

Established by the South Carolina Legislature in 1991, the PIP grant process uses revenue from the statewide tax on Bingo games to fund improvements to Senior and Community Centers statewide. The program is administered by the Lt. Governor's Office on Aging, and provides much needed support for the network of support services available to help older South Carolinians lead active and vital lives in their own homes and communities.

Grants awarded for the 2005 PIP funding cycle include the following projects:

Capitol Senior Center: ($52,900) for renovation/addition to the existing senior center in Columbia.

Edgefield County Senior Citizens Council: ($350,000) for construction of a new senior center in Edgefield.

Georgetown County Bureau of Aging Services: ($350,000) for the construction of a senior center in the Pawley's Island area.

Marlboro County Council on Aging: ($9,000) for electrical rewiring and improved parking at the existing senior center in Marlboro.

McCormick County Council on Aging: ($350,000) for the construction of a new multi-purpose senior center in McCormick.

Town of Mt. Pleasant: ($350,000) for a new senior center in the Town of Mt. Pleasant.

Newberry County Council on Aging: ($350,000) for the expansion of the existing senior center in Newberry.

St. James South Santee Community Center: ($100,000) for the renovation of the existing center in McClellanville.
